

Who's in charge?

Certainly Not

We the People

I am sure by now as we end the first quarter of 2009 one thing for sure that the citizens of the United States of America will all agree on is we are no longer United.

We the People started the New Year with a new president who seemingly had already taken office the day after elections in November of 2008. There was no orderly transfer of power because apparently Mr. Bush and his entire administration had all quit without telling any one some months (or years) earlier.

There had been either no functioning Securities and Exchange Commission, Justice, Defense, Energy, Trade or Foreign Relations departments or any other supposed oversight entities or they were all staffed by self dealing egotistical, greedy idiots.

The only federal government agency seemingly functioning was Homeland Security which was very busy taking away just about every last bit of privacy or personal rights of We the people left under the Constitution.

They all seem to have forgotten the old saying “You can fool some of the people all of the time, and you can fool all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time”

We the people have been asleep and blinded by the same self centered shallow greed. We have turned a blind eye on reality and the responsibility that comes with democracy.

We the people have stood by and expected our so called leaders; our elected officials to do the right thing.

We the people got just what we expected; our elected officials did the right thing; for themselves.

We the people allowed them to change the definition of “Elected” to “Purchased”.

Free elections? Not hardly. Even the media puppets have begun predicting who will win elections by reporting who leads in the campaign money race as the lead story rather than report or even ask what the candidates are running for, or want to do, or change or correct if elected.

We the People had better wake up and pay attention to Who's in Charge and What they are doing before there is no longer a United States of America and

We the People wake up one morning to find we now live in the Socialist Republic of America.
